

ABSTRACT

A system and method for displaying to a user alternative content of a transmitted television program based on data stored in the user's profile as well as viewing context parameters, such as available viewing time or audience composition. Sources of 5 alternative content to be presented include transmitted alternative program segments as well as media and Internet data input.